ABOUT TACOMA

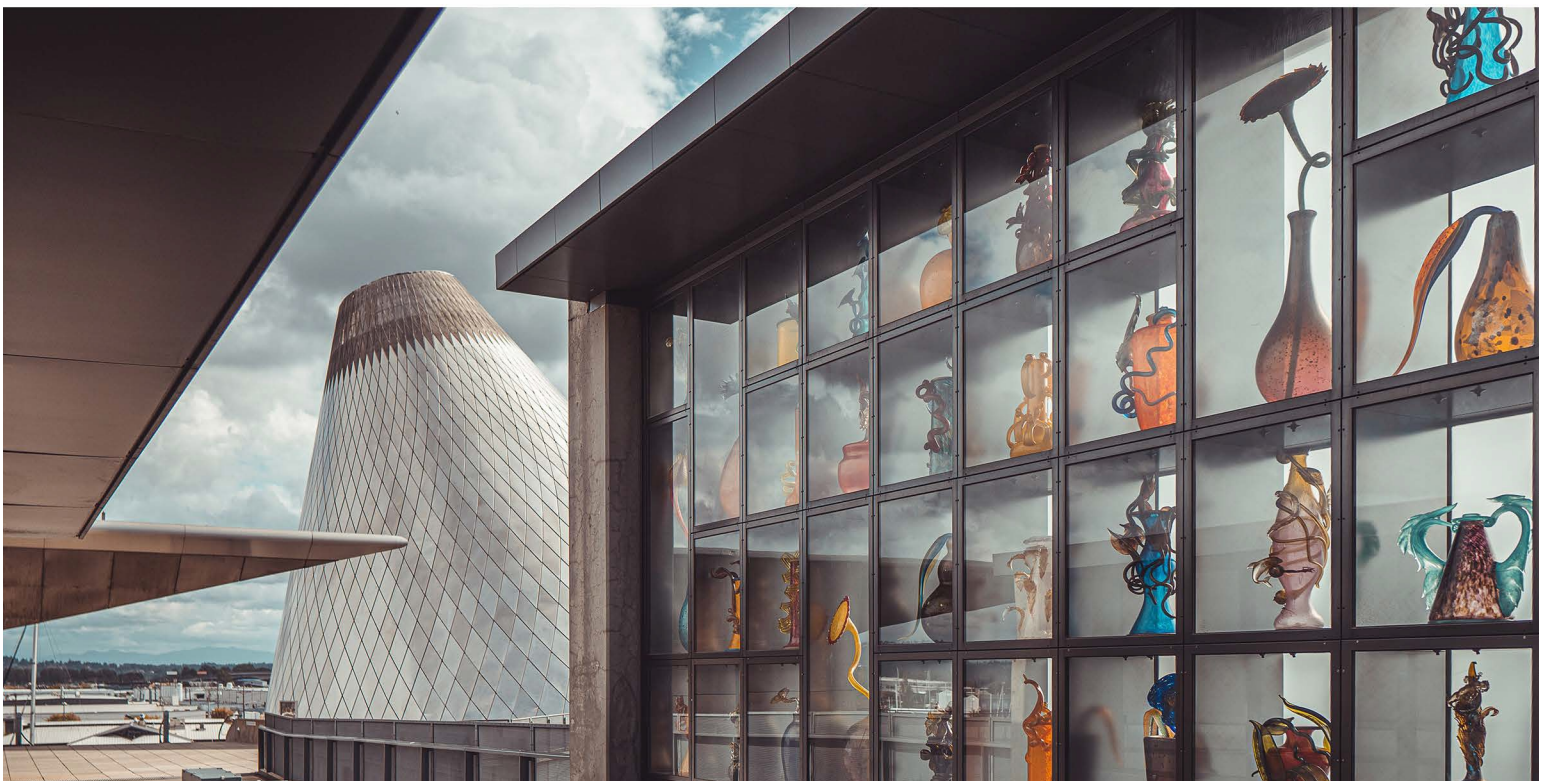

Just 20 minutes away from the Seattle-Tacoma International Airport, Tacoma is located on Washington's Puget Sound about 32 miles southwest of Seattle and 31 miles northeast of the state capital, Olympia. Located in Pierce County, Washington Tacoma has about 218,000 residents, according to 2019 population estimates from the U.S. Census Bureau. Tacoma is a city on the rise.

Tacoma is home to a vibrant, creative community of writers, artists and musicians, photographers, filmmakers, passionate entrepreneurs and business owners. Tacoma is experiencing unprecedented growth. Urbanites are drawn to downtown Tacoma for its competitively priced living spaces with sweeping mountain, city and water views; while families gravitate toward Tacoma's charming neighborhoods with big city amenities, include the food and nightlife scene along Pacific Avenue, 6th Avenue and in the Hilltop neighborhood. A haven for hikers, runners and cyclists, Tacoma is alive with activity from students attending the University of Washington Tacoma, the University of Puget Sound, The Evergreen State College, Tacoma campus, local trade and technical colleges, and nearby Pacific Lutheran University.

Tacoma is one of the top 100 best places to live according to a 2020 report from Livability.com, a leading online journal that explores what makes small-to-medium sized cities great places to live. Tacoma is a port city with a growing aerospace scene, as well as a skilled workforce thanks largely to several colleges, universities and military installations that call this region home.

Today, Tacoma is at a critical junction as we grapple with the pressing public health, economic, and civil rights issues of our time. Tacoma Urban League needs a leader who can navigate through unanticipated obstacles, and build coalitions to support the African American community.
